FIRST SKATING

Warm Weather Threatens To Spoil Opening of Sport Here

THE arrival of a warm wave today seriously interferred with the first ice skating of the year which has been enjoyed during the last few days by the Hans Wagners of the city

The cold snap early in the week put ice in fine condition for skating but this morning it was beginning to take on an appearance of sogginess By noon there was a slight skim of water covering the ice which threatened to end the winter sport until the next drop in temperature

Although there has not been sufficient snow to afford any tobogganing skating had attracted a number during the early part of the week The lake at McKinley park in the southern part of the city has been a mecca for many outdoor enthusiasts

By International News Service

While King George is still in the gravest danger following two lung operations has miraculous rally after the arrival in London of his eldest son the prince of Wales again raised hopes today for his recovery It was obvious however that these hopes were hanging upon slender threads

Even the royal physicians now numbering seven were astonished by the king's unexpected show of stamina From the very threshold of death the stricken ruler by a display of indomitable will power rallied his waning strength to the point where the doctors dared to puncture his right side and then remove a section of rib for the removal of poisonous pus at the base of the lung

A bulletin issued at Buckingham palace at 10 45 a m London time said the king was not losing ground

However the deepest anxiety still pervades the nation and the royal family It will not be dissipated until the attending doctors themselves show more optimism

The next 48 hours will be the crucial period

19 AGENCIES IN SPRINGFIELD'S CHEST SYSTEM

Community Welfare Plan Worked Out Successfully in Ohio City

PLAN SIXTH DRIVE

Campaign for 1929 Set for February, Organization Outlined

BY MURRAY POWERS
Managing Editor The Star

Three Ohio cities of varying size—Elyria Lima and Dayton—have been considered in previous articles on the community chest plan of charity collection and distribution Another Ohio city that has adopted the chest plan is Springfield soon to get its sixth campaign under way This year Springfield is changing the date of its drive to February—having previously held its campaigns in November—because of the approach of winter and the Christmas season Considerations that caused this change were lagginess of money on the holidays need of coal for winter clothing and coal election interest hunting season and the departure of a number of wealthy citizens for the south for the winter months

Nineteen agencies participate in the Springfield chest The budget last year was $181,853 In 1926 the goal was $182,735 the slight increase owing to the Social Service Bureau and the Salvation Army regarded as Springfield's two most important relief agencies according to Miss Marion C Lewis in charge of Springfield's chest publicity

Secretary in Charge

Springfield's chest is managed by a part executive secretary who acts and orders of a volunteer executive committee of nine members including a prominent local citizen who serves as chairman This committee meets once a month and three times a year with the community chest board a group of 17 citizens who represent the 19 agencies in the chest Another committee is composed of representatives of [illegible] organizations not receiving financial aid from the fund such as Civitan Kiwanis Rotary Optimist clubs etc This committee together with the community fund board and executive committee from the Springfield Federation for Community Service meet annually only to elect officers The principal purpose of this organization is of course to tie in all groups in the city keep them sold on the chest make them available for service during the campaigns and make all give This conform to chest principles—with one campaign only each year

Methods of Operation

Two of Springfield's methods in operation of its chest are particularly interesting

Its campaign organization is built along the usual lines until reaches the industrial division Industrial

Lansing Mich Dec 13—Mrs Miller 48 mother of 10 children, is in jail here today, awaiting sentence of life imprisonment, while state wide protests against her fate gathered momentum and appeal for her pardon were carried to Gov Fred W Green Under the new criminal code the life sentence is mandatory and Judge Charles B Collingwood is required to impose such sentence on Mrs Miller after her conviction yesterday of a fourth violation of the prohibition law

She is the first woman to receive a life sentence under the new code She has never been convicted of any crime except selling or delivering liquor The total of her three previous sentences was less than 14 months Good behavior cut this time to less than a year most of which was served in the Ingham county jail

Whether Mrs Miller will be sentenced today or next week depends on the technical procedure adopted by Bernard Pierce prosecuting attorney If he asks Judge Collingwood to impose the life sentence for the fourth offense itself the code requires that the Judge follow that course Under this plan Mrs Miller would be sentenced [illegible] dict is

MAN IS HELD AFTER FILING HOOVER SUIT

Charged with Conspiring Aainst Life of United States President

Cleveland Dec 13—Gustav Ebding 41, an inventor and author who filed suit in federal court here to restrain Herbert Hoover from taking office as president of the United States, was in jail today on a charge of conspiring against the life of the President

Ebding filed his suit several days ago setting forth that Hoover is not eligible to become president since he has lived in this country only nine years past. The constitution, Ebding says requires that a president must have lived in the United States for the past 14 years.

Ebding was arrested last night on orders from the department of justice at Washington According to government officials the arrest was a mere matter of routine in order that Ebding might be held while he is investigated An insanity warrant was sworn out by Miss Irene Hungerser assistant district attorney

Ebding said he filed the suit merely to settle a legal point, and protested his arrest. "If these were medieval times I don't suppose I'd have dared file the suit They'd simply take me out and chop my head off," he remarked

Ebding is to be arraigned Dec 20 and his bond was set at $7,500

WAR BETWEEN PARAGUAY AND BOLIVIA NEAR

Notes Delivered in Washington Charge Bolivia Concentrates Forces

SUPPLIES CENTERED

Aspirations of One Country Seen as Factor In Dispute

Washington Dec 13—Because of alleged provocative measures by Bolivia war is imminent between Paraguay and Bolivia

This was the gist today of identical notes from the Paraguayan government which were delivered by its chargé d'affaires Juan Ramirez to Secretary of State Kellogg and to Victor M Cluttier Peruvian minister who is chairman of the Pan American conference special mediation committee

The notes reiterated charges that Bolivia is massing troops and war supplies on the frontier

Private dispatches to Secretary Kellogg however did not indicate such a grave situation as described by Ramirez There is no evidence Kellogg said that Bolivia is mobilizing large numbers of troops

Has No Word

The Paraguayan notes said Bolivia is concentrating armed forces at El Vanguardia from which Bolivian soldiers were driven by Paraguayan forces last week War supplies are also being centered near Bahia Negra the port of Paraguay on the Paraguayan river it was declared

Diplomatic Bolivian minister has received no information from his government on the Paraguayan charges but he called it is reasonable to suppose that Bolivia is taking all necessary precautionary measures

Set Alignments

Paraguay Bolivia feared would give Bolivia the moral reparation she demands maintaining that Bolivia was the aggressor in the recent clash and fired the first shot Ramirez blamed the Bolivians for creating a fort in the disputed territory near the Paraguayan port of Bahia Negra on the Paraguay river and charged that the whole difficulty was Bolivia's desire for an outlet to the sea

It was indicated in diplomatic circles here that Paraguay would have the moral support of Argentina Brazil and Chile in the event of a conflict and that Bolivia would have that of Peru While diplomatic in

Congressman Charges Only Rich Man Can Afford To Seek Office

Washington Dec 13—[illegible] charging that the country does not want a millionaire congress Rep Loring M Black Democrat of New York today proposed drastic amendments to the corrupt practices act to safeguard the right of a poor man to become a lawmaker for the nation Rising campaign costs he declared is steadily taking a toll from members of congress and there is an increase of wealthy candidates

Charging extravagance the increased population of congressional districts higher living costs and lax corrupt practices laws have all combined to bring about the condition which must now be faced I said He would limit a congressional campaign expense to $5,000

The cost of congressional campaigning has become almost prohibitive he said As a result there are an increasing number of wealthy candidates running for congress

"The present corrupt practices act practically permits an unlimited amount of money to be spent in a congressional campaign This should be changed so that no candidate could spend more than $5,000 for all purposes in a congressional district

Declare Hoover May Become South American Mediator

WOULD DEPEND ON U S. INTERVENTION

President-Elect Now Strictly Aloof and Silent on Quarrel

DANGEROUS PROBLEMS

Issue Between Paraguay and Bolivia Daily Drags Up Old Scores

Abroad Hoover Special Train, Villa Mercedes, Argentina, Dec. 13—While President-elect Herbert Hoover, on his goodwill tour of South America, has remained strictly aloof and silent upon the territorial quarrel between Bolivia and Paraguay, the circumstances, as they exist today, may result in the possibility of Mr. Hoover becoming a peaceful mediator in event the United States government decides to offer its good offices for intervention.

As Mr. Hoover is making his goodwill visit as a private citizen, this fact would enable him to act without directly involving the high office to which he has been elected. So far, since the cessation of diplomatic relations between Bolivia and Paraguay, he has filled the role of silent spectator.

Unprecedented Situation

The fact that the League of Nations acting upon representations from Paraguay, has, to some extent, intervened, brings about an unprecedented situation in the Americas which may induce Washington to take direct action.

Not since the outbreak of the World war have the South American diplomats been called upon to wrestle with such dangerous problems as those involved in the dispute between Bolivia and Paraguay over the future nationality of the Grand Chaco district, lying between the two republics.

Openly and officially all South American nations are interested only in the preservation of peace. But the issue is daily dragging up more old scores that have lain dormant for years.

A secondary complication involves mediation under the auspices of the League of Nations, the United States or a group of South American nations.

Argentina May Act

The extensive newspaper display of dispatches bearing upon the situation together with the action taken by the League of Nations council at Lugano, has concentrated international attention upon the Bolivian-Paraguayan situation just at the time Mr Hoover is on Argentine soil.

There have been reports that Argentina may act. It is known that the government has carefully canvassed the problem and has exchanged opinions with other South American states.

The possibility that Mr. Hoover may be called upon by President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg if the United States government decides to offer its good offices, is being discussed in Argentina.

This letter from Charlotte Brandeau, of Swansea, Mass., is worth reading: "I used Peterson's Ointment and soap for a very severe case of eczema. It was all over my body. I have tried many things to cure it, but not one of them gave me a cure. I saw the ad of Peterson's Ointment in the Fall River Herald and now I am better. SPRINGFIELD CHEST ON EFFICIENT BASIS pledges include men and women in factories, sales persons in stores, clerks and stenographers. These pledges are solicited through their factories and stores. The "ten cents a week" plan has proved highly popular in Springfield, many factories simply taking ten cents a week for the chest out of the pay of each employe who pledged to the chest. $5.20 being the popular donation among industrial workers. This factory cooperation saves the community chest the expense of billing industrial contributors and makes it easier to obtain pledges from industrial prospects during drives. It is understood, of course, that when a man loses his job the remainder of his pledge is cancelled.

No Canvass of Homes

Springfield has gotten away from the house-to house solicitation which was begun to get pledges inlosed by the prospect cards. Women at one time had charge of the house-to-house canvass division, but it was found to be slow and tedious work, it brought many duplications and much confusion and netted very little money.

The second very interesting point brought out in the Springfield plan concerns its publicity.

All persons connected with the chest drive are called together the night preceding the opening of the campaign. This is usually a dinner meeting—a pep rally. Some feature is usually planned, a series of talkeums or a chest movie. There is an inspirational talk by the campaign chairman and the movie, if one is used, is turned over to the local theaters to be shown during the campaign. The drive workers meet each noon during the campaign, each pa ing for his or her own lunch. The speakers' bureau is a feature of the drive, bringing speakers from out-of town to address the noon meetings of the campaign workers and arranging for local persons familiar with the fund and its agencies to talk at church, club, Sunday school and luncheon meetings.

Campaign in Schools

A solicitation is conducted in the schools with all emphasis placed on the educational rather than the financial value of such a campaign. The idea is to get the children interested enough in the campaign to go home and talk it over with their parents. For this reason the school campaign is valuable publicity at the crucial moment. Other publicity projects include newspaper ads, billboard and window card advertising, booklets, dodgers and civic decorations.

This is one of a series of articles on the community chest plan which The Star is presenting to its readers due to the local interest in this method of charity distribution.

ORDER SUSPENDED

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 13—The Sphinx, junior honorary society at the University of Michigan, today had been suspended indefinitely as an organization. The action resulted from an investigation by the senate committee on student affairs after charges that members and initiates of the society were drunk at the initiation last week when three students were scalded.

The less important a man really is the more important he thinks he is.

GRANTS DIVORCE

Wife Starts Action So Husband Can Marry Cripple

BRISTOL, Conn., Dec. 13—The strangest divorce in court records was granted today by Judge Allyn Brown to Mrs. Arthur G. Main. She asked it and got it so that her husband, a Bristol business man, might marry a crippled girl to whom a child was born three months ago.

More than that, she obtained a doctor for the girl, Alice Hartson, 22, and paid her hospital expenses. "I thought it was my Christian duty," she told Judge Brown today.

The husband, Mrs. Main said, fell in love with the girl and, finally came to her and confessed that he was the father of her child.

MOUSER ADDRESSES LOCAL LABOR UNION

difference between the rate asked by the company and the rate 7,700 Marion users are paying would amount to $93,200.

"For three years the cities that stuck together in the fight have been paying 10 per cent less for their gas than those that signed separate agreements with the gas company," Mouser said.

Mouser branded past utility commissions as extremely unfair to the people.

"In the large majority of cases before commissions in past years the decisions have been favorable to the utilities," Mouser said. He blamed this condition for the failure of all the cities originally in the gas rate fight to stick together. "The people have grown accustomed to being defeated in matters before the commission," he said.

Prospect for Victory

Pointing to recent decisions of the present commission and the state supreme court Mouser held out hope for victory in the case against the Logan Gas Co. "In spite of the millions they have to spend to win."

Samuel Newman, representative of the Tobacco Workers International Union, shared the floor with Mouser last night. Newman spoke on conditions confronting the laborer and business man at present.

R. K. Ruppart, secretary of the central union, told members last night that the body is planning a series of monthly open meetings and smokers during the winter. According to his announcement speakers will be brought to the meetings and occasional musical programs will be arranged.

Mrs. Houplet, of the state department of health, division of nursing, gave an address, using "Nutrition" as her subject.

Following the address, the fifth and sixth grades presented a short two-act playlet entitled, "Christmas on Holly Farm." The program was concluded by a playlet staged by the eighth grade entitled, "Christmas in a Day Coach."

Miss Mary Ellen Weiss, Mrs. Hazel Walker and Miss Forry, teachers of the fifth, sixth and seventh and eighth grades, prepared the program.

During the interlude between the last two numbers, several important announcements were made by Superintendent Moore. The preliminary stages of rehearsal are past and the play is rounding into excellent shape.

JUST NUMBERS

Three Local Men Lose Identity in Records at State Prison

The identity of three Marion men recently sentenced to 15 years in the Ohio penitentary has been submerged in the throng inhabiting the gray-walled building.

Only in their own memories is there any connection between Joe Sunsern, John Hollenbach and Vincent Grosso, who entered the prison three weeks ago and their present means of designation. Sunsern has become No. 39,438, Hollenbach is No. 39,439 and Grosso is No. 39,440.

The three men, ranging in age from 20 to 24 years, were sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary after pleading guilty to charges growing out of a series of holdups and a gun battle with officers.

Some men are always wanting people to tell them how good looking they are, but a woman will stand before a mirror and see for herself.

LOCAL SCHOOLS NOT HANDICAPPED BY FLU

No Evidence of Unusual Illness Seen in County, Official Reports

Although many sections of Ohio are suffering from an influenza epidemic the disease is apparently making slight inroads in Marion county.

A check made on school attendance this morning by Dr. N. Sifritt, county health commissioner, showed that school attendance in practically all the county centralized and village schools was up to normal. Only in one instance was attendance been affected seriously by sickness.

Prospect school heads reported that illness was responsible for the absence of 20 pupils at that school today. Whether influenza was responsible for all the absentees is not known.

Reports from the majority of the other schools showed that absence caused by illness was no larger than usual.

PARAGUAY, BOLIVIA REPORTED NEAR WAR

Notes Delivered in Washington Charge Bolivia Concentrates Forces

both the Paraguayan and Bolivian sections of South American alignments minimized oil as a factor in the dispute, it was said the Standard Oil Co. has large oil concessions in Bolivia, and that undoubtedly potentially at least, Chaco Boreal, the disputed territory, was valuable from this standpoint.

Aspirations Factor

In the background of the dispute, of course, lies the national "aspirations" of the Bolivians. The territory lies as a wedge between the Pilcomayo river along the undisputed Bolivian frontier and the Paraguay river along the undisputed Paraguayan frontier, with the two rivers joining at the Paraguayan and Argentinian frontiers near Asuncion, capital of Paraguay.

Bolivia's river, the Pilcomayo, is non-navigable. The Paraguay river is navigable, according to the Bolivians, from Port Bahia Negra, Paraguay. The Paraguayans, according to Dr Ramirez, contend it is navigable to a point much further up in a part controlled by Bolivia. The Bolivians, Ramirez said, have long wanted to control Port Bahia Negra, in order to get its commerce, principally oil, through to the sea via the river Platte, in Argentine, into which the two upper rivers flow.

ing record for the past year. This structure cost approximately $60,000.

J. W. Thew's new building on West Center st., near Orchard st., which is being built for occupancy by Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago mail order house, as a retail store, is the third largest item. Approximately $50,000 is the figure set for this structure.

Kleinmaiers' new store building on South Main st., follows the Montgomery Ward building in cost with an estimated construction figure of $22,000.

C. D. & M. Builds Station

Construction of a combination freight house and passenger station by the Columbus, Delaware & Marion Electric Co. on West Center st., at a cost of approximately $19,000 is the next building on the list.

Sixth comes the Cussins & Fearn store on East Center st., erected by Henry A. True at an estimated cost of $17,500.

The remodeling work done on the offices of the Erie railroad follow. This work cost approximately $15,000.

Eighth and ninth on the list come two structures erected by the Roxana Refining Corp. One is a $13,800 filling station and the other a $12,500 bulk depot.

Next is a $10,500 store room built for the Kroger Stores by Clark & Kluck on Davids st.

Two $10,000 structures erected by C. A. Curtis & Co follow.

Next are two $6,300 buildings, one of which was the Fairbanks and Kraus building on West Center st., while the other is a factory structure erected by the Commercial Steel Castings Co.

A storage room constructed by the Marion Steel Body Co., at an estimated cost of $2,800 follows.

A $2,300 structure erected by the Marion Pattern works is the last important item on the list.

Dwelling Total High

Dwellings built here so far this year have cost approximately $508,950, 151 building permits being issued for homes.

Garages have cost approximately $42,915. Permits issued for the erection of this type of structure total 295.

This survey is based upon the building permit figures for the two years. Costs stated in taking out building permits are usually 25 per cent too low, however it is conservatively estimated. This percentage has been added to the building permit estimates in obtaining the figures given below.

The building permit records do not include all construction projects, investigation has shown. Builders frequently neglect to take out permits so that this year's record will actually exceed the amount listed officially.

CHILD'S COUGH WAS GONE BEFORE DOCTOR ARRIVED

Almost Instant Relief Came When He Phoned Worried Mother What to Do

Glad that she took the advice of her doctor, Mrs. C. P. Murphy, like vast numbers of mothers in Marion and vicinity, realizes how quickly a child's cold can now be ended by home use of a pleasant hospital method and how much needless misery and risk is caused by putting off the right treatment.

For a day or so her little daughter, Louise, had shown signs of a cold. She didn't pay much attention to it at first, thinking that the cold would soon go away. But that night the child kept her awake coughing and she became alarmed when the thermometer showed temperature.

Then she called the doctor. He advised Mrs. Murphy to immediately give the child Ayer's Cherry Pectoral—a quick remedy that has proved to be of unusual value in hospital treatment of children's colds.

In just a little while she had stopped coughing and was sleeping quietly. When the doctor called next day her fever had disappeared, congestion was clearing up and in another day or so all trace of the cold was gone.

Note: Other cases reported daily—all certified by attending physician.

Ayer's Pectoral can be had at the nearest drug store. Even sick children love the pleasant taste—and doctors advise it because it is as harmless as the purest food—made of wild cherry, terpin hydrate and other ingredients which cold clinics and more than a million mothers have found to be the quickest and most effective to stop a cough and end the cold.

A Chicago woman is seeking a divorce because of the incompatibility of herself and husband as bridge partners. If that's a ground, there is absolutely nothing to estop practically all the married card players of the land from severing their marital shackles.

Jesse R. Clark, of Cincinnati, has been elected president of the Union Central Life Insurance company, the position so ably filled by Jesse R. Clark, his father, from 1906 to 1921. It is seldom that a father and a son of the same name head a great financial institution, and still less seldom when each attains to such a position through unquestioned merit.

Celtic's Career Eventful.

The White Star liner, Celtic, which went ashore at the entrance of picturesque Queenstown harbor, Monday, has had quite an eventful history. Early in the World war, the Celtic hit a mine in the North Atlantic off the coast of Ireland, but her hull was little damaged by the resultant explosion, and repairs were speedily made. Later the liner was torpedoed by a German submarine off the Isle of Man. The torpedo hit her starboard side near the engine-room, and she began to take water rapidly and list. She would have gone to the bottom speedily had not the submarine commander, to make, as he thought, sure of her fate, circled around and torpedoed her on her port side, which caused her to straighten up, and she drifted into shallow water, into which she sank on an even keel. Two years ago, she collided with the American freighter, Anaconda, in a thick fog off the Nantucket lightship, but all the damage she sustained was above the water line. Now she is fast on a ledge of rock known as the Cow and Calf, with about one chance in three that she may prove a total loss, her fate depending largely on the weather.

The Celtic was the first of the famous "Big Four" of the White Star line, the three following her being the Cedric, the Baltic and the Adriatic in the order named. Her registered tonnage, like that of the Cedric, is a trifle over 21,000; the Baltic being 2,000 tons and the Adriatic 3,000 tons larger.

The White Star people, not desiring to cut the rates on their Oceanic, Majestic and Teutonic of that time, put on the Celtic as an intermediate vessel to carry first-class passengers at a somewhat lower rate despite the fact that she was larger than any of them. At the time of her launching in 1901, her length of 680 feet and nine inches, her beam of seventy-five feet and three inches and her registered tonnage of $21,179 made her the largest vessel afloat. At that time she was the wonder of the maritime world, and when, early in 1902, she was chartered and carried 835 Americans on a Clark tour of the Mediterranean, she evoked admiration at every port touched.

It will give some idea of the advance in passenger liners to say that the vessel, which, at the time of launching twenty-seven years ago, was the largest afloat, is now outranked in size by two score vessels in the passenger service, three of which are over twice as large and three more almost three times as large, with one building which will be well over three times the size of the Celtic, which last year was placed by the White Star line in its cabin service.

Burning Up Public Funds.

The wisdom of the house appropriations committee in recommending that work on the Yakima reclamation project in Washington and the Vale reclamation project in Oregon be suspended it not to be questioned. These are two of the reclamation projects concerning which we spoke in these columns several months ago, at which time we contended that there was not the slightest foundation for the hope that the government would ever be made whole for the money expended by it on them. Yet at that time we did not begin to have adequate conception of the waste of public funds contemplated.

From a Washington wire we glean that the committee cut $1,450,000 from the appropriation for the Kittitas division of the Yakima project and $611,000 from the amount recommended for the Vale project, approving an appropriation of only $20,000 for the former and $6,000 for the latter, manifestly just enough to maintain such improvements as have already been made.

Testimony was offered the committee by Elwood Mead, commissioner of reclamation, to the effect that the Northern Pacific railroad, which owns considerable land on the project, had refused to expend from $20 to $25 an acre in preparing the land for irrigation in such a way as to make it attractive to settlers.

Commissioner Mead further testified that it was costing the government $160 an acre to provide water for the land, and that the government's prospective investment of $11,000,000 is jeopardized inasmuch as settlers will not take up the land unless it is cleared.

Testimony before the committee relative to the Vale project, so advices from Washington state, indicated that private land-owners were boosting their prices to such a point that settlers buying lands would soon be unable to make their payments to the government. The testimony offered the committee showed that a price of $50 an acre was being asked for land appraised at $10 an acre.

Exception can hardly be taken to the course of the Northern Pacific Railroad company in refusing to expend from $20 to $25 an acre for such land as it may own within the scope of the Yakima project. Its management knows that here are millions upon millions of acres of unsought farming land in this country and that there is no occasion for the reclamation of more farming land for years to come, save to give employment to citizens of such states as are seeking to make a raid on public funds.

It may have been forgotten by many readers, hence it may be well to state that the Northern Pacific railroad was the first to be built across the Great Northwest. The territory over which the line was run was practically unpopulated. In order to encourage the building of the line, the railroad was given alternate tracts of land twenty miles square on each side of the line from Minneapolis to the Pacific coast. As a result, the Northern Pacific is not in need of irrigated land having almost countless tracts of land which do not need irrigation.

But the idea of the government paying $160 an acre to provide water for land to be used for farming purposes is almost beyond conception. Far removed from railroad facilities as much of such land is, without good roads, there is probably not an acre of it which would justify half, even a quarter, of the cost of irrigating it. Why the government ever should have contemplated expending $160 an acre for irrigating farm land when better land, with almost every imaginable facility, may be purchased right here in Ohio for half the money is bound to be a mystery hard of explanation, unless it be that we have in it another demonstration of the evil of congressional log-rolling.

Two automobile bandits held up a dairyman in Beloit, Wisconsin, and made off with his collections amounting to $100. We have often wondered if the public ever stops to consider that such crimes as this, all banditry in fact, is bound to increase the cost of living.

The woman owner of a Chicago candy store has been sentenced to jail for sixty days and fined $100 for "selling a pint of whisky to a nine-year-old girl up there for eighty cents." From the wording of the item, one is left at a loss to know whether the woman was held to have offended in selling to a minor or in cutting the price.

A Nebraskan has just collected from a Chicago firm a dollar and compound interest thereon at five per cent, for a day's work done for the firm by him forty-eight years ago for which he had never sought payment previously to the present. Old Gabriel will probably have to give his horn an extra toot or two to awaken that fellow.

Having refused a bribe of $20,000, a deputy prohibition administrator up in Detroit was told that he would lose his job and got bumped off. Within six weeks he did lose his job for reasons unknown to him and two attempts on his life have since been made. Evidently the political influence of the rum ring is superior to the shooting ability of its gangsters.

Ramsay MacDonald says a Franco-British treaty without the participation of the United States therein is worthless. Remember how the American advocates of the entrance of this country into the League of Nations used to shudder when they told us of the isolation we would suffer were we obstinately to refuse to enter the League?

St. Louis has discarded her arc lights for a $2,235,000 incandescent system which was turned on for the first time, Monday night, by a blast of a siren on a plane a thousand feet above the city. And our memory goes back to a time when people paid out good money to attend a show, the chief feature of which was the arc lights by which the main tent was illuminated. We certainly have been coming along in the development of electricity.

Grouches Traced to Vision.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

Are you taking care of your eyes?

Fortunately, blindness is comparatively uncommon. But eye trouble of one sort or another is very, very common. Indeed, many a person is suffering from needless redness, smarting, itching or actual pain in the eyes. Many an obstinate or recurring headache comes from eyestrain. Many a case of "dyspepsia" is merely the reflex of eyestrain. Dizziness, sickness at the stomach, wandering pains in the head—these are a few of the dozens of symptoms which may be traced to the eyes.

Any one of these troubles may be met at any age, young or old. After forty there is sure to be temporary or permanent blurring of vision. The time has come for glasses, but it is natural to forget this, or, at least, to wish to overlook the fact.

Everybody dreads the thought of wearing glasses. I know I do. I regard them a dreadful nuisance. I wish I could throw mine into the river and never need them again.

All of us who must have glasses for reading, realize how General George Washington felt at Newburgh on that fateful day when he was about to read one of his last addresses to the army. Wiping off his spectacles, he said: "I have grown old, gray and blind in the service of my country."

It makes us feel old to wear glasses and, particularly, to be unable to make out the type without glasses. But, yet, after all, what a blessing they are! With well-fitted lenses we can continue to the end of life to read the finest print. We can sew and do our tasks as well as we did in early youth.

Of course, the eye troubles I have mentioned may not require glasses for their correction. Simple treatment may overcome them. Sometimes redness and stickiness of the eyes may come from catarrhal conditions of the nose. But more likely there is astigmatism or some other form of eye defect which requires correction.

If you are in the slightest doubt, consult a specialist who will test your vision. He will see if the eye muscles are in perfect balance. Perhaps there is nothing wrong, but it will be a relief to be sure about it.

Swelling of the eyelids, crusts in the eyelashes, sticking together in the morning, redness of the eyeballs and lining of the lids—all these may be overcome by getting rid of the strain. You will look better and feel better to have these unsightly defects remedied.

You must not forget that your efficiency and temper may suffer from eyestrain. If you are not working as well as you used to and are unaccountably cross and crabbed, think of your eyes. The whole trouble may center there.

You are unwise indeed to go without glasses merely because of your prejudice against them. A loss of this sort does no credit to you. To pinch your feet because you can't bear to wear the right number in shoes, or to go without glasses when they are really needed—what can we think of you?

The way to save the eyes and to make sure they are to serve you always, is to care for them now. Neglect at this time may cause you sorrow in the future.

BOLIVIA AND PARAGUAY.

While President-Elect Hoover is making his goodwill tour of South America, up bobs a Bolivian-Paraguayan crisis threatening war between the only inland republics of that continent.

Bolivia! Paraguay! Names of places on the map to most of us.

It seems that the boundary between these countries isn't definite and lies in a little-known and only partly-explored region. A few days ago small bodies of troops from each of these nations met in this boundary zone and a fight took place. And there is a cry for revenge and war. News despatches tell of 40,000 Bolivians marching in a great demonstration in the city of La Paz.

Many of us have been accustomed to think of Latin-American wars and revolutions as of the comic opera variety. But that is not history.

Paraguay was almost wiped out once by war. That was in the six years between 1864 and 1870. Dictator Francisco Lopez involved his country in war with Argentine, Brazil and Uruguay. The Paraguayans went at it with a battle cry of "Conquest or Death" and furnished history with the story of a nation fighting overwhelming odds to practical annihilation.

When this war began the population of Paraguay was 1,337,439.

When it ended the population was 221,079 and only 28,746 were men.

Think of it. A nation fighting until eighty-four per cent. of its population was wiped out. No comic opera war that. The figures are from the Encyclopedia Britannica.

Today Paraguay has about three-quarters of a million population. Bolivia has about twice as many. The majority in both countries are Indians.

Bolivia, named for the great South American liberator, Simon Bolivar, was once included in the territory of the Inca civilization which flourished before Columbus discovered America. Its modern history is a repetition of wars and revolutions.

A study of these wars and revolutions plainly proves it was not the possession or armies or navies that made them, but the will of the people to turn to war as a last resort in settling disputes. Today the armies of Paraguay and Brazil number only a few hundred each.

To educate the world not to think in terms of armed conflict every time an international crises arises is the purpose of the Kellogg pact now before the United States senate.—Columbus Citizen.

A FILIBUSTER FOR REAPPORTIONMENT.

The filibuster is not always bad. Sometimes it is invoked in a good cause or for a good purpose. If a filibuster should develop in the present short session of congress to force action on the pending reapportionment bill, it would be at least excusable.

Reapportionment is greatly needed. There has been none since the 1910 census, with the result that states which have grown rapidly in the last eighteen years are deprived of just representation not only in the house, but in the electoral college.

States that stand to lose seats and electoral votes bar the way to just representation. Representatives who might lose their own seats, were justice done, combine to prevent action. The constitution directs reapportionment after each decennial census, but how is congress to be forced to obey the constitution? Where is the court whose writ of mandamus would lie?

The Fenn bill, now pending, retains the present membership of the house, 435, but provides an automatic reapportionment on the basis of the allotment of seats furnished by the secretary of commerce after each census, in case of the failure of congres to act. Adoption of this bill, which its supporters will strive to make the unfinished business of the house till acted upon, with a threat of a filibuster in reserve, would solve the difficulty and eliminate a good deal of the selfish politics that has operated since 1920 to deny justice to a number of states and at the same time give excessive representation to other states.

It is, of course, too late to reapportion under the census of 1920, but the Fenn bill would insure prompt action under the census of 1930—and all succeeding censuses.—Minneapolis Journal.

New York Day by Day.

BY O. O. McINTYRE

New York, Dec. 13—Manhattan's home going rush, long a delerium of utter confusion, is growing worse. New Yorkers are accustomed to the diurnal flurry, but for the stranger there is a never-forgotten spectacle in the swift rush, clang and clamoring madness.

The "Big Push" is between 5 and 6 and at no time does the city seem so terrifying. In crowded centers it becomes a stampede with life and disaster separated by a hair's breadth. More than 2,000,000 people leave the city nightly for the suburbs.

The heaviest stream of pedestrianic traffic is across Forty-Second street where commuters fairly dog trot along to catch trains. It requires ten traffic cops to keep them moving at Forty-Second street and Fifth avenue, the pivotal point of congestion when the rush is on.

Times square, Brooklyn bridge, Fourteenth street and Grand Central are the high spots of underground jams. The subway kiosks swallow millions like human gophers scurrying into their holes. Then there are the melees at ferries, on elevated platforms and in the tubes.

That this traffic task is performed in an hour is one of the city's miracles. The dead calm and desolation on New York streets between 7 and 8, before the night crowds begin moving, is almost a touch of the supernatural. The most striking illustration of tranquility is in Wall street.

After sundown the only show of the fast and furious life of the day are the geysers of steam from the street gratings and the sprinkling of lonely night watchmen guarding the nation's hoard of gold. To all appearances Wall street becomes a completely abandoned area.

In spite of the rush-hour tautness, there is a communal consideration and friendliness among galloping city folk. The lame, halt and blind always find help at their elbows. There is time to pitch coins into beggars' tin cups and to exchange greetings with those people who have learned to know only by sight.

There is admiration in the home-going rush among husbands, who find it difficult to powder a stationary back, in watching perky flapper types from office buildings powder their noses, rouge their lips and indulge other cosmetic artifices as they gallop past window mirrors.

The hurrying crowds snatch evening papers from newsstands without payment to save time, and it is a tribute to the city's honesty that newsies rarely lose a penny. There are innumerable corner stands where attendants withdraw during the rush hour so patrons will not feel forced to fumble for change.

The Fuller building has been known since it was built by its nickname, the Flatiron building—imposed by a headline writer. Recently the name was officially changed to the latter. The building, which so resembles a ship's prow headed up Broadway, had an air of desolation for a year or so due to the northward sweep, but after a complete renovation has bloomed with new activity again. In the outland the Flatiron is the best-known building in New York, and is owned by a lawyer in Seattle.

The Prairie.

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS.

Every American of ripe age who recalls his school days must remember the prairies that were described and pictured in his geography book. In his imagination they appeared dotted with the great hairy-headed buffaloes, wandering on treeless plains that stretched away until they disappeared at the horizon like an ocean. Living in the eastern states amidst hills and forests, he could hardly conceive the absence of such things anywhere, so that the prairies seemed to him a wonderland, whose charm was heightened when Fenimore Cooper began to enliven it by the romantic and exciting presence of hunters, bee-hunters and wild Indians.

What made the prairies, and why did not trees grow upon them, when they had plenty of tall grass and similar vegetation? In answer to these questions it has generally been asserted that fires swept off the trees and herds of buffaloes kept them from growing up again. Other explanations are based upon conditions of drainage following the disappearance of the ice-fields at the close of the last glacial epoch.

The question of the origin of the prairies is, in fact, not settled although the white man has conquered them by finding a way to make groves and forests grow, as well as vast grainfields flourish, where the buffalo and the red men knew only treeless expanses. Professor B. Shimek of the State University of Iowa has studied the prairies for more than fifty years, and he maintains that the forest fire and Buffalo theories do not solve the mystery. He says it is a mistake to affirm, as some do, that forests are gradually encroaching upon the large prairie areas yet remaining. He finds that where the prairie turf has been broken or disturbed, the disturbed areas are first invaded by native "prairie weeds"—(often with introduced weeds)—but in the course of a few seasons the characteristic flora comes back. This consists not only of grasses, but of many other plants, especially compositae and leguminosae. Moreover, thousands of acres of prairie groves have perished, and "most of them would do so in time if man did not change conditions by planting and cultivation and by creating protected zones by erecting buildings and planting shelterbeds."

Areas once covered by implanted groves have, it seems, been reoccupied by the prairie flora where cultivation has not interfered. Thus though man has for his immediate purposes conquered the prairie, still it is a conquest that has to be maintained and defended by virtue of continuous occupation. The prairie flora, Professor Shimek contends, represents a "climax" stage, which shows the reason why it persists and comes back again when it gets a chance. Recent statements about the extent of the invasion of the prairie areas by forests he considers to be exaggerated, declaring that where changes have occurred along the borders of prairie regions they are comparatively slight fluctuations, caused by alternating wet and dry seasons, and they are quite likely to be retreats as well as advances of the forests.

The original prairies covered not only immense areas west of the Mississippi valley, as in Texas, Arkansas, Kansas and Oklahoma, but they also spread widely east of the great river, covering almost all of Illinois and a part of Indiana. Professor Shimek's statement of the cause of their existence is summed up in a technological sentence which does not convey much satisfaction to the lay reader. He says, writing in Science:

"The prairie flora is distinctly xerophytic and its presence upon the areas which we call 'prairies' is determined by those ecological factors which make for xerophytism."

Now xerophytism, based on the Greek word, "xeros," appears to mean that the prairie plants are "drys," i. e., that they prefer a dry nourriture, but why, or in what circumstances, they set up their kingdom in the "prairie states" is another story, which, if known, has not been translated into English.—Copyright, 1928, International Feature Service, Inc.

The Way of the World.

In an experiment with television it was found that an actress whose appearance was to be recorded in a distant place by means of radio could not wear a brilliant ornament or bright jewelry. A rhinestone in the general make-up might wreck the whole play. Something like this often happens when there is no television in the business. People who might make a good impression wear such badly-selected clothes, wear such bright decorations, that they "wreck the play."

In a rolling-pin contest in an Indiana town a woman threw the weapon twice the usual distance and struck another woman on the nose. The contest was called off. Perhaps if it had been a man who was struck on the nose the contest would have been called a success. Women like to engage in contests. Men prefer them out of that sort of competition. Too bad that women find it amusing to copy so many of man's useless habits. Women do not imitate well—and that is no criticism.

During the World war the British used an electric thermometer which registered the temperature of puffs of air thrown up by artillery fire. This temperature gave the experts a basic figure from which they could calculate the exact whereabouts of the enemy artillery.

The war produced brilliant splashes of ingenuity. What we need now is a stimulus for ingenuity which will be something other than war. War brings out great qualities in men, and peace sometimes obscures them again. Certain second-rate philosophers have been led to say that war is worth while and a great agent for intellectual progress because of this stimulating effect. Ingenuity is greatly to be desired. Normal man does not need the unspeakable wretchedness of war to make him produce. He does need something or other which will create and keep alive in him a sense of the possible importance of his contribution to his world.

Candy Keeps the Young Things Warm

HERE IS WHAT SANTA CLAUS SAYS TO YOU:

Since Ohio is in the grip of the Influenza, everybody must keep fit to keep well; above all don't buy food stuffs and especially candy at the bargain counters. Mothers should see that their kiddies are getting the best of everything to eat, they should see that their feet are kept dry, and dressed warm, and remember that the A B C Vitamins are added to the D which is for diet. It is a mistake to eat the same foods, in the same proportion, winter and summer, for some foods are far more valuable than others as producers of heat. The human system needs to be stoked as does the furnace. So fill up the candy jar with Tender's pure, wholesome candies. Remember a piece of candy at the end of every meal is more than a pleasing dessert. It is a source of more heat for your internal engine. Keep this engine going, muscular activity and the right food for fuel and energy, and it will keep you warm in the healthful way. Then he adds, "I will come to TENDER'S Saturday and make some candy canes for the kiddies, and I will give a candy cane away to every good little boy and girl." Remember Saturday at one o'clock. Just follow the line.

Then he goes on, "all kids should insist that their candy should come from Tender's where they are made with purity, wholesomeness, and care."

Best Remedy for Obstinate Cough Made at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It also promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and at the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs and "flu" coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

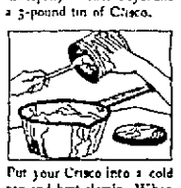
COOKING SCHOOL NEWS

As quick as broiling a steak

All you need is an ordinary saucepan, a French Fryer and a 3-pound tin of Crisco.



Put your Crisco into a cold pan and heat slowly. When a piece of bread browns in 60 seconds your Crisco is ready for frying potatoes. Don't wait for Crisco to smoke.

Fill your French Fryer half full of potatoes and lower it into the Crisco. Increase the heat as the cold potatoes naturally cool the Crisco a little.

When brown lift French Fryer out of the fat, shake lightly, drain the potatoes on brown paper and sprinkle with salt.

When you have finished strain your Crisco back into the can and set it aside to cool. Then it is ready to use over and over again for anything you want to fry. The taste of one thing will not be carried to another.

French Fried Potatoes

JUST because we eat them almost every day we are likely to think of potatoes as a homely food. Why—they are banquet food! Really the flavor of the potato—particularly when French fried—is one of the most subtle and delicate of all flavors that inventive nature ever concocted.

But to bring out this delicate flavor it is essential that you use a sweet flavored cooking fat. And there's only one way to really test the flavor of your fat—taste it, just as you taste your milk; just as you test your eggs.

Taste Crisco as it comes from the can. Isn't it easy to understand now why Crisco's fresh sweet flavor makes fried foods taste so much better?

French Fried Potatoes

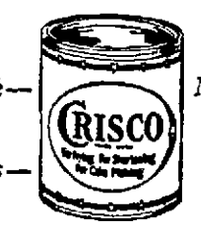
A real treat at home. When fried in Crisco they are delicious—a crisp even brown, no greasy outside and no smoke in your kitchen.

Allow one medium-sized potato for each person. Peel potatoes, cut in strips about one-half inch square. Let stand in cold water about an hour, or they can be kept in the ice-box overnight if covered with water. When ready to fry, drain, dry in a towel, and put a few at a time into hot Crisco (395° F.), or when a bread crumb browns in 20 seconds. When brown and tender, drain on brown paper, sprinkle with salt, and serve.

Fry raw or cooked sweet potatoes the same way, but do not soak them in water.

Never wait for Crisco to smoke, as it would be too hot to fry if it were hot enough to smoke.

You taste your milk—
You test your eggs—



NOW—taste your shortening!

Crisco's sweet flavor will delight you!

CRISCO IS USED FOR FRYING, FOR SHORTENING, FOR CAKE-MAKING

Is something the matter? she whispered and he saw her wide great eyes, that had been dancing and flecked with golden lights turn dark and pleading

He pulled himself together What did it matter now? The girl with the haunting eyes and the mouth like a flower was going to be Ralph s and why not? He had everything else, all the breaks all the luck let him take the girl too make a clean sweep of it Mv hard luck that s all he thought The orchestra was beginning again The music flowed into his consciousness, sweet ly gently at first gaining in volume growing wilder more rhythmic succumbing to the insistent wailing call of the saxophone the monotonous primitive beat of the drums He met her eyes Dance?

She stood up, faintly smiling She was in his arms The music throbbed rushed over them swept them away The tables blurred vanished the other dancers had no reality They were alone only they two in a mad magical world

I think I m—dizzy she said brushing a hand over her eyes when the music stopped quite suddenly and they were back on earth again, in the middle of a slippery floor

It s because you re hungry! he said quickly taking her arm and guiding her back to the table That was a crazy thing to do—asking you to dance when you were so tired—"

Oh but I m not tired any more," she told him seriously All the things I was tired about have—sort of moved away

I know he answered just as seriously The things he had been tired about must have moved away too He knew they would be waiting for him, waiting to claim him later Sinister ghosts he couldn t be late Will let them wait this was his night the night he would have left to remember afterward

We ll have the regular dinner he told the obsequious waiter, and bring a special order of those big black olives and is there anything that you like Daphne

She said there wasn t and he breathed a sigh of relief He wasn t quite sure there would be enough to meet the bill anyway Did she have any money in that little red purse of hers? And what would she think if he had to borrow a dollar—or two dollars—or five dollars?

What are you laughing about she demanded laying down her soup spoon

Maybe I ll tell you later Diane She nodded Why eat when you can dance, and you re young and the music calls?

Other diners watched them but they saw no one sufficient unto themselves Pretty girl quite an unusual type a slender gourmand in the one decided noting the bloom of her delicately rounded cheek And a swarthy woman wrapped in a bril liant Spanish shawl sighed and said

Look at them They ought to be put out They make everyone else look so elderly!

And then—so unbelievably soon it was Allan looked at his watch in amazement—it was over They must have eaten their dinner though neither of them had any clear recollection of it for they weren t hungry and their empty black coffee cups were on the table The waiter presented his bill and was tipped and enough over thank heaven for a taxi home The row had all melted away The orchestra was leaving Sleepy waiters leaned against walls politely stifling yawns

In the taxi he sat close beside her, so close that he could feel the warmth of her body so slender and young He ached to put his arm about her surely that would be all right even if she did belong to McKevitt But he was afraid to Afraid of breaking the spell

The taxi rattled along a cobbled street bringing them nearer and nearer home Only a few minutes left now and it would all be over never to happen again

He strained his eyes in the darkness trying to see her once more trying to impress upon his memory forever every line of her small, wistful face

Goodbye she said on the door step I ve had a wonderful time I didn t know anybody could have such a wonderful night after such a terrible day

The faint light from the fan shaped transom over the door fell on her upturned face It shone with an almost unearthly beauty

You don t know what it has meant to me he heard himself saying and stopped horrified at the sound of his own voice

The spell that had helped them in pioneer ettes in a mad whirl of gaiety the evening suddenly snapped Realities came rushing back She made a quick frightened movement toward the door

He held out his hand to say good bye and instead he whispered Kiss me Daphne just — just—once—

She backed against the door, really frightened now, not knowing what to say "I can t—I can t— she mumbled, feeling frantically for her keys

Just as she knew he would, he brushed her resistance aside and took her forcibly and none too gently in his arms It was no use to struggle, he held her as she had never been held before

Oh, please don t" she begged "Ralph—"

Darn Ralph!" And he forced her head back and kissed her, one long drawn out kiss. She no longer resisted it seemed inevitable and inexplicably tragic.

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affections

BY ADELE GARRISON

It will be less than two weeks till Christmas and when ma and Jubilee woke up this morning and I was lying there telling him about it and hating to get up he wagged his tail like he understood all about it And then when I pushed him out of bed with my feet and got up I didn t freeze to death like I thought I was going to And when I opened the window to let him out it was not nearly so cold as it had been It was plenty cold but not cold enough to make my shirttail feel as cold as a tin roof when I put my britches on

We all sawed out for town as soon as I had et and the bunch had came because we wanted to look in the store windows and see what they had for Christmas presents because the frost had been on all the windows while it was cold and no one could look in and the frost was all on the inside so a fella couldn t hold his tongue against it till a place was melted but when we got there where the stores are this morning the frost had melted on some of them but they had so much steam on them that we couldn t see through them anyhow So then we went to Frenchee s and when we saw the stuffed turkeys we got an idee that surprised us because we hadn t got it before

When we got to school it was so cold that all the scholars and the teacher had went inside to wait till the bell rung so we started to throw snowballs against the windows and we got called in and the teacher made the boys erase the blackboards so that there would be room for the girls at the radiators and so that Aunt Bunt whose father works in the stink factory wouldn t get a chance to get warmed up Then we were playing out in the hall and at the end of the banisters downstairs there has always been a round ball, so no one could slide down without getting a bump and I went to climb up and get on it and I found it was loose and I lifted it up and it came out because it was just set in with a wooden peg and I held it up and said Yoo hoo! and everyone looked and then they began sliding down so close together that it made the banister warm Then the girls came out and started sliding and when Freddie got on it with her back turned I slipped the ball in and left the ball where it belonged so pretty soon Freddie hit the ball so hard with the back end of herself that one of her behinds dubbled up like a jackknife and she said if Teacher s here I ll tell her you buried her with the snowballs But I didn t tell that She certainly looked surprised when she got back up and found out what had happened to her

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M LEWIS

Madge Suspects a Catch

Lillian didn t put out her hand to take the check and accept which Sam Brixton was holding out to her But with a movement enormously deft and quick for so large and unwieldly a man he had the papers in her lap and then stepped back looking at her appealingly But I was sure I caught a gleam of alertwatchfulness back of the appeal

For several seconds Lillian let the papers rest in her lap while her eyes searched Samuel Brixton s face

Twenty thousand dollars she repeated at last That is a large sum Sam I did not understand from—Tom—that the sum involved was that large

As always there was the hesitation before speaking the name of the husband of whom she had no long but cruel, sordid memories and I realized now how nerve racking this interview was with this stirring of those memories which for years had been mercifully buried

It wasn t that large Mr Brixton said promptly But of course there is interest for all the years since You are entitled to that you know and Helena will not feel that I have atoned fully unless that is included in the sum

I am entitled to nothing Lillian said with a sudden fierceness stressing the pronoun If I accept this proposition of yours it will only be with the understanding that Marion is to receive the money

That, of course is up to you Mr Brixton said and I saw his eyes watching the papers in her lap As if impelled by his gaze she lifted first the check and looked at it and then laying it down took up the paper he had designated as a receipt, and began reading it

Something in Samuel Brixton s eyes fixed upon Lillian s face warned me that in the receipt she was reading lay the real reason for this interview

There was a light tap upon the door and I crossed the room to open it A little premonition which was fulfilled when I saw Charles Owen standing in the doorway

I am sorry if I am interrupting he said but the tennis players are involved in a dispute over a point which they say only you can settle I tried to arbitrate the matter but they refused my offices It will take but a minute or two I am sure They are all willing to abide by your decision

It was a plausible errand, for Marion and Mary are eternally squabbling over tennis points and when Dick is absent I am their umpire I sat with my imagination working overtime as Dicky would have phrased it, I read into the message a cleverly staged maneuver of Charles Owen s to get me away from Lillian so that his half brother could have a few minutes alone with her unhampered my my presence.

I was in no mind to let Mr Owen suspect my doubt of him however and I smiled in my very best manner

'Oh! those tiresome children! I exclaimed I mean ours of course, not your young people,' I added with perfunctory contrition 'But Mary and Marion have more disputes than could be found at Wimbledon or Forest Hills. What is their particular issue now? I am familiar with them all and can send back the decision at once"

It had not expected this move I could see that plainly, but His recovery was prompt.

'Oh' I never would dare to return without you," he said with a smile. 'Besides, I m a terrible dub at tennis, and I m sure I wouldn t get the message straight. Won't you let me escort you over to the courts"

Famous radio stars will pass before the microphone at 11 o'clock Friday night in the weekly offering of the National Broadcasting and Concert bureau in a program to be heard over the WEAF network of the NBC system.

Well-known artists to be heard at that time include Leslie Frick, contralto, Astrid Fjelde, soprano, Kathleen Stewart, pianist, Georgia Price, harpist, the Ballad Singers and the National Concert orchestra.

Ballet music from Goldmark's, "The Queen of Sheba," will be the colorful feature of the Cities Service hour to be heard over the WEAF network at 8 o'clock Friday night. The suite will include "Dance of the Bayadere," "Bee Dance" and the "Professional March."

"Hand Me Down My Walking Cane" will be sung by Dan Packard to the tunes of the fiddle, Jews-harp and Zither in the program by the Interwoven Entertainers to be broadcast over the WJZ network at 8 o'clock Friday night.

Listen Girls - Billy Dale Isn't Married; But Listen Again - He's Happy That Way

BY HALLIE HOUCK
Marion Star Staff Writer

MERRY Christmas, girls, here's good news, and accept our condolences boys, for it may hurt your darling. Billy Dale, of the Myrtyl Rose Players, is not married.

Emphatically, most emphatically, he made it clear that he is not matrimonially involved, and furthermore, that he has no immediate intentions along that line.

Not that he has anything against a happy matrimonial state, but no one excepting a woman in his profession would suit. Mr. Dale is wise where many actors are not—he knows that a professional and a non-professional can not enjoy a happy married life.

For the information of Marion theater-goers who have become more than ordinarily interested in this young man who takes prominent roles in the Grand theater stock company's productions, I was assigned to the task of interviewing him and giving the public a "close-up" of him as he is in private life. Not much of a "task," to be true.

Interested in Aviation

What does he look like, off the stage? Well, in room 504 of the Hotel Harding there lives a young fellow of 23—he'll be 24 the twenty-fifth of January—whose mind and heart are given to the stage, except for aviation, which is demanding his attention in spare time now. Lindbergh he admires, but his ideals are all actors and actresses, with an ambition to some day meet Pauline Frederick.

Tall, with wavy brown hair, eyes that aren't quite as blue off the stage as they are with the aid of make-up, clear, slightly tanned complexion, straight nose, even white teeth and well-kept nails, and one of the most delightful voices imaginable. That's a condensed description of Billy Dale.

He clips his speech so short that often he has been reprimanded by the manager on this account. But to the reporter it was refreshing after the drawling, uncertain manner of speech characteristic of many people. This habit of speech he undoubtedly inherits from his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Karl Dale, both born in England.

Likes Colors

Most interesting to the feminine readers may be what he was wearing and how his room was furnished. His receiving outfit was a pale green shirt with a four-in-hand tie of burnt orange silk a pair of trousers of a brown mixed material and a lounging robe of orange and blue stripes. Sounds like a conglomeration of color, doesn't it, but really, it was quite nifty looking on Mr. Dale. Probably this was due to his nonchalant, careless air, for there aren't a half dozen men on earth at whom the reporter wouldn't have laughed if seen in that riot of color, against the background in which red and black predominate.

Because hotel rooms are the only homes of actors, they usually furnish them to suit themselves, and Mr. Dale brought his own dresser covers and bed-spread, of red and black silk. The top of the spread is a design of a large flower in red and black with a black silk panel around the side. The covering of his wardrobe trunk is of the same material, with covers for the dresser and stands.

Incense burners and numerous autographed pictures of his friends adorn the dressers and writing desk.

Native of Michigan

He was born in Hancock, Mich., and his mother and father with their family of three boys and a girl later moved to Muskegon, Mich., where Billy Dale and his brothers and sister grew up. At 12, the subject of this interview became fascinated with the theater, working first as an usher, at which job he vows he walked thousands of miles, then as an operator of the projecting machine and finally as an organist. All of this at various theaters in and around his "home town" of Muskegon.

Dale is keenly interested in the organ and has played the one at the Marion Theater. If ever the time comes when he can spare an hour or so a day, he plans to take up a more intensive study of organ playing.

Dale wants the world to know that stock company actors and actresses don't sleep until 11 o'clock in the morning. Sometimes the company is at work at 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning on the Grand theater stage and the rising hour is 8 a. m. every day and Sunday. The cast never knows what time Miss Ross may call a rehearsal. After next week the company will start on all new plays and that will mean extra work and extra hours of study. The continual grind of a two-a-week program is nerve-racking, according to Dale, and can't be continued long until the loss of sleep and nervous strain begin to show.

Fan mail is the bane of Dale's existence, but it has to be answered, and he does it grudgingly. Inquiries for his picture are answered promptly though, and his bill at the photographers' during the year amounts to no mean sum. So far the Marion public hasn't realized that their stock company members give out photographs to admirers.

Applause Arbors' Tonic

One custom that the Marion public is slow to adopt is that of greeting their favorite actor or actress with applause at first entrance on the stage for a play. It pops them up wonderfully, and they put all they have into a performance, according to Dale.

Last but not least, Mr. Dale has been accused of being conceited. If there's one thing that arouses his ire more than any other, it is being accused of this fault. He's not, and on slight provocation may do battle with any one who says he is. It seems that way it is because he's in a rush to get the things done that he wants to do, and that he doesn't know personally anyone in town with whom he can stop and visit.

Billy Dale's mother died in 1922, a few short months after he graduated from Muskegon High school. The oldest of the four children, he is the only one with an intense desire for the stage. A sister is employed as stenographer at The Central Wheel Co., of Michigan, one brother is physical training superintendent of the Battle Creek High school and his youngest brother is production manager of the Brunswick Phonograph Co. Needless to say, Billy is the favorite of his family.

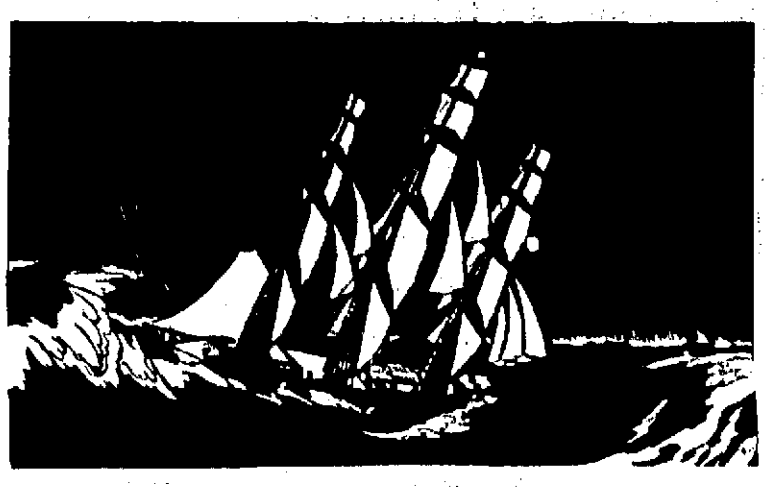
A New Reo Flying Cloud
The Mate



Racing for port, slim nose in the smother while the rival merchantmen hove to and rode out the storm—flashing down the Roaring Forties to make one glamorous record after another on the stubborn trip around the Horn . . . what made the "Flying Cloud" the darling of the nation in the good old clipper days? Craftsmanship! . . . Every inch of her tuned to its purpose. Every quality so balanced as to make a perfect whole. The last inch of canvas—that could be safely carried. The final foot of cargo space—that didn't cut down speed. No wonder—like to like—she gathered to herself the cleverest Master and the staunchest Mate who owed allegiance to the Stars and Stripes. Today, our field of action shifts to landward. Our cars crowd roads around the world as once our clippers filled the glittering lanes at sea. But balanced craftsmanship still turns the trick—so much of this, so much of that, no more—and so the Reo Flying Cloud sails on. Speed—much more than you'll ever need. Quick pick-up and such 4-wheel brakes as bring her up all-standing. A wheel that answers to a finger's touch. Dependability that hugs the road no matter how you let her out. A power that rides the hills as once the elder "Flying Cloud" rode equinoctial gales. More space—an extra-wide rear seat, a front seat with those unexpected inches that make an added passenger a pleasure, not a temper test. Beauty, of course—a sleekness and a grace inseparable from perfect balance of design. From this day forward—here's the cheering news—there's not a single Flying Cloud—but two. The Master is the bigger car. The Mate is next in line. Every quality that distinguishes the first goes also for the second—except size . . and price . .

Kirk Heads Ohio Grange; Portsmouth Gets 1929 Meeting

NEW STATE MASTER TO SUCCEED CATON

Port Clinton Man Wins Over Three Other Candidates

OTHER OFFICERS NAMED

Dyer Condemns State Tax Laws and State School Situation

Mt. Vernon, Dec. 13—With the selection of W. F. Kirk of Port Clinton as master of the Ohio State Grange and the choosing of Portsmouth as the site of next year's meeting place, the annual convention of the organization opened its final session here today.

Kirk's victory came on the second ballot when he was chosen over three other candidates, F. S. Tussing of Canal Winchester; J. W. Fricker of Hamilton, and W. G. Vanderbark of Zanesville. He succeeds Harry S. Caton of Coshocton, who becomes secretary of the national grange.

Vanderbark was elected secretary of the state organization, Mrs. Vanderbark who, according to widespread reports, planned to enter the race for head of the state organization, did not have her name presented.

Former Representative

The new master has been a member of the grange's executive committee for the past five years and is a former state representative from Ottawa county.

Claude W. Purdy, probate judge-elect of Knox county, was reelected steward. Other officers elected: Overseer, C. A. Dyer, Columbus; lecturer, Joseph W. Fritcher, Hamilton; assistant steward, Guy E. Johnston, South Charleston; chaplain, the Rev. W. C. Patterson, Pavonia; treasurer, C. S. Randolph, New Lexington; gatekeeper, H. A. Atwood, Carrettsville; Ceres, Miss Harriett Weaver, Ashville; Pomona, Mrs. Earl Bailey, Lebanon; Flora, Mrs. C. C. Holl, North Canton, and lady assistant steward, Mrs. William Lukens, Harrisburg.

William G. Crouse of North Lima was elected to the long term on the executive committee and George Cunningham of Mt. Vernon to the short term.

Condemns Tax Laws

Dyer, in his report to the session yesterday, voiced condemnation of the state tax laws and the "past situation" in the state school administration, and urged the amendment of the state budget and bond issue laws. The appraisement laws of the state he characterized as "a disgrace," and declared they should be modeled after those of other states having continuous appraisement and equalization by trained officials.

In order that "opportunity for graft and misappropriation of funds could be eliminated," Dyer suggested that the next legislature be asked to amend the present state school administration law. He further urged the amendment of the bond laws so that officials would have less power to issue bonds.

The budget laws, he said, should be so changed that all officers, in spending funds in every public activity, would be brought under the laws' provisions. He concluded with a plea for a general reform in state and local government but asserted that this should be brought about in such a way that costs would not be increased or centralized without safeguards.

Expect New Ball Will Be Adopted at Annual Meet

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

NEW YORK, Dec. 13—Having been told that nobody wanted the larger and lighter golf ball, the United States Golf association naturally is proceeding to see that everybody gets it and is making such progress that the project is very likely to become official at the annual meeting Jan. 5. This is known in some circles as the cod liver oil method. Nobody wants cod liver oil, nobody wants the lighter ball That's why they get them. Both are very good for you, according to the golf association.

The writer naturally is taking in too much territory in attempting to speak for everybody on this question Men like Jones are indifferent to innovations. They know that they will be able to play golf if you give them a toy balloon to hit and an ostrich plume with which to hit it. It is the sap golfer to whom the proposed legislation is violently objectionable It will deprive him of the great American right of lying about his drive.

Will Mean Two Balls

What really will happen is that we will have two types of ball; the official or tournament ball and the old jackrabbit. This means that when you come into the locker room breathless with the news that you cracked 103, with a lighting eight on the last hole, the cynics will sneer openly and inquire:

"What ball did you use?"

Anyhow the golf association says that it is doing everything for the best and is understood to quote the following as benefits that will accrue:

1—It will save golf clubs money on upkeep and construction since the so called "marathon course" will pass with the coming of the less lively ball

2—The shorter course will be a great boon to the older generation whose arteries harden loudly as they labor over the present route, greatly disturbing those who are in the act of sighting eight-inch putts.

3.—It will bring the brassie and spoon back to tournament play, also the long iron to the green, one of the most difficult shots to control.

Courses Will Be Shorter

Under the new order, a championship course will vary in length from 6,000 to 6,200 yards, it is said Only a few reputable "houses" will be designated to make the official ball and the new of Blatz, Blatz, Blatz and Blatz simply need not apply. It will be too busy turning out the "hootleg" or high pressure ball for the saps, anyhow.

In any case, the proposed new ball will not be ready for play until 1931, it is understood, because it will take that long for the manufacturers to install new molds and complete their tests

These details may look the part of assumption or presumption They really are neither. I am informed that all that is necessary to carry the legislation is for the executive committee to approve the recommendation of the ball and implement committee, which approval is almost inevitable

LIMA Y-INDUS TEAM AFTER ANOTHER WIN

Will Tackle Locals at Y. M. C. A. Gym Tonight; Lineup Changed

The Lima Y-Indus basketball team will visit Marion tonight in an attempt to register its second victory of the season over the local "Y" team. The game, which is scheduled to get under way at 8:15 o'clock, will be played at the "Y" gym and admission will be free

The Lima outfit boasts a smooth working and fast passing offense, featuring short snappy passes The locat cagers in the initial contest at Lima were defeated, 34-19 The visitors have been playing together for five years and some of them are former luminaries at the two high schools in the northern Ohio metropolis Bernie Cullen, the fast forward and leader of the Lima team, was a trouble maker to the Marion team's defense in the first game.

The Marion aggregation while somewhat weakened by the loss of Chalm Cline their high scorer for the first six games have added a great deal of strength to their defense in "Bill" Lowe The Marion team's style of offense will have to be changed not a little by the loss of Bill Fetter, who was injured in the Industrial league games Monday night.

As yet Manager Cram was undecided upon his starting lineup but will probably take the floor with Rod Cram and Lowe at the guards, Bob Elliott at center and Charlie Osterholt and Church at the forward berths.

It isn't Duty that kicks you on the shin under the table; it's Caution.

HOPES RISE FOR GAMES AMONG BIG THREE TEAMS

New Haven, Conn, Dec. 13—Hopes for a mending of the disrupted "big three" were seen here today as the result of the plea in the Yale Daily News by James C "Red" Barrett, captain elect of the Harvard eleven, for a renewal of athletic relations with Princeton.

Barrett stated that the game with Princeton previously had aroused more enthusiasm at Cambridge than any other game, with the exception of the Yale clash, and voiced a hope that some way would be found to bring about a resumption of relations.

dio Moves Down to 293, Only To Jump Back to 311

BULLETIN

New York Dec. 13—After oundering around unsteadily for the best part of the forenoon, the high priced motor car, copper and ndustrial stocks today advanced o a slightly higher range of prices under the same leadership as in the previous session of the stock market.

Radio's quick dip to 293, a loss of 13 points, was followed by a sparried recovery to 311, only a point below Wednesday's close, around which level the stock was fairly active Packard Motor suffered a frantic spell at the start, largely the aftermath of yesterday's violent closing shake-down, but recovered all of its lost ground

BY W. S. COUSINS
I N S Financial Editor

New York, Dec. 13—A flurry in stock market this morning carried prices of many of the market leaders down to the lowest price level of the week, wiping out most of the effects of the rally which followed last Saturday's break The market was excited and nervous over Packard's sudden 11 point break near the close of Wednesday's market, and unprepared for the tidal wave of selling

Confusion spread to the high priced market favorites when Radio, after opening at 312, unchanged, dipped like a stone to 293, the low for the move, and rebounded in a few minutes to 311 Packard was driven down six points to 145, recovering to 150 and Chrysler, after a drop to 116 sold above 120. U S Steel broke to below 152, and General Motors dipped to 185 1 2, a little lower than in last week's break.

The stock market was decidedly a mixed and mixed-up affair, with neither the long nor the short side safe bet for more than a few minutes at a time The big steam rollers of the pools and powerful professional traders flatten out the market for a moment only to see it revive like a blown-up balloon in the next. Then stocks jump around over a range of 3 points to gain a one-point profit is hardly a safe place for the small trader Wall Street brokerage houses sent out cards today, naming 20 per cent minimum margin and refusing to buy any stocks under $20 a share except for cash outright—no margins

TODAY'S REVIEW OF YESTERDAY'S GRAIN

Chicago, Dec 13—Buying power was again lacking in the local grain pits yesterday and prices sagged There was no demand to follow Tuesday's upturn and support for the markets was found only at levels below the previous close.

Short covering, responsible for most of the upturn in wheat Tuesday, did not continue at the opening In the absence of any buying, local bears pressed the advantage and longs realized

Despite a number of rather bullish developments, interest in corn was not widespread and some profit taking followed the bulge of the day before gave the market a heavy tone As in wheat, locals took advantage of the weakness to sell.

Wheat prices closed 3-8@3 4 lower; corn was 6@5-8c down oats 1-8@1 4c lower, and rye 1 8@3 4c off Winnipeg wheat futures finished the session 1 2@5-8c lower.

Liverpool Weakens

Liverpool's action was responsible in a large measure for the failure of buying power to hold. The English market started to follow our advance of the previous day by opening unchanged to 1 2d higher, but the upturn met with continued offerings of old crop Argentine wheat, and the market reacted to close unchanged to 1-4d lower.

Dispatches said that Russia is expected to begin buying in January and India has purchased three more cargoes of Australian wheat, but these attracted little attention as seaboard reported a quiet export trade Total sales were estimated at 400,000 bu, most of these being Manitobas.

Sharp technical upturns, such as occurred Tuesday and have taken place several times within the past two months, seem to indicate that the good support under the wheat market, which bulls are repeatedly pointing out, is a reality. However, it does not appear probable that this will develop into aggressive action for a time as the buying fails to follow the upturns. This fact is responsible for lack of outside interest, as this seldom develops until the market shows some direction

Large World Supply

The principal reason, it seems, for the failure to follow the upturns is the large world's stock of wheat visible, which yesterday was placed at 390,000,000 bu, or 100,000,000 bu more than a year ago. Until more of this supply is absorbed there probably will not be any inclination for the demand to follow the bulges and the market will most likely continue its choppy trend with trade mainly a professional affair.

However, while no real upward trend is looked for at present by the trade, the continued ability of the market to stage a comeback such as Tuesday's suggests caution on the bear side as well, which serves only further to lessen the outside interest.

Scattered realizing through commission houses and by locals, led to professional pressure in corn. Part of this was based on early weakness at Kansas City. However, southwestern cash markets continued strong with further buying to fill old sales, a good demand at the Gulf and country offerings still light.

While New York reported some resale offers, there was further activity at the Gulf with 100,000 bu reported sold, bids advanced ¼c and indications of active demand in cash markets, including the local one, by exporters. The weekly weather crop report told of delays in husking, particularly in Iowa, where it was said outstanding corn would likely be damaged by the bad weather

After one has built his house, and next, furnished it—then he has to think of something else interesting to do. So he sells it.

Today in Marion Markets

Groceries, Produce, Meats, Grain, Livestock

Although a few of the retail fruit, vegetable and meat markets of the city have had Christmas trees on sale for several days the first of the standard Yuletide decorations were seen on the street in front of stores yesterday. A West Center st. dealer had his stock displayed on the sidewalk.

Christmas trees will vary in price this year all the way from 50 cents to $15 Price depends on the quality and size of the tree. These prices are approximately the same as last year's quotations.

Trees are reported to be of very good quality. Those seen here so far this season are strong and well covered with needles

Both pines and spruces will be sold here Although many people prefer one variety of tree to the other, there is no reason for this preference dealers say One variety is just as good as the other for Christmas purposes, they state, as neither lasts longer than the other.

No price changes on either fruits, vegetables or fruits were reported here this morning

A CLEAR COMPLEXION
Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel, made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.—Adv.

LONDON BUS STOPS TO PICK UP SHAW

London—George Bernard Shaw, with his white beard blowing in a stiff breeze, recently was seen running down the street in hot pursuit of a west-bound bus. Passengers inside heard him call out:

"Hi! there, you had better stop. You may not have the opportunity of carrying me this way for several days again!"

The conductor, apparently recognizing the identity of his distinguished passenger-to-be, yanked the bell rope and brought the omnibus to a stop. Some say this is a record, for London omnibuses usually will not halt between the regular stations for anyone or anything.

Headaches Go With This On Handkerchief

Over three hundred thousand of the handy vials of the new discovery, known as "Aromo," were sold by one of the large chain drug stores in the first few months after this marvelous preparation was put on the market. And all of this was done without one line of advertising!

People just can't help telling others about "Aromo," when they see for themselves how wonderfully it clears up the worst headaches, and relieves colds, hoarseness, "smoker's throat," nasal catarrh, etc.

"Aromo" is entirely different from any preparation you've ever seen. It is an aromatic liquid which vaporizes as you breathe it in through mouth and nose. No atomizer necessary. No waiting for tablets or powders to be absorbed by the system. "Aromo" acts directly on the affected parts. It dispels the congestion which causes headaches. It clears the air passages and makes breathing easy and natural. It soothes the irritated and inflamed membranes of the nose and throat, and relieves coughs, hoarseness and nasal catarrh.

"Aromo" is so easy to use. You just put a little on your handkerchief and inhale it. It is so highly concentrated that a few drops on your handkerchief in the morning will keep its effectiveness all day. Or you can carry the handy 60c vial in purse or pocket. All drug stores recommend and guarantee it.—Adv.

Don't Neglect You

Father John's Medicine is Best for Colds

Don't get too busy during your Christmas shopping and neglect the cold which you are very likely to take in the overheated, crowded stores. Remember that neglected colds lead to more serious sickness and that any cold should be treated promptly with a pure food medicine such as Father John's Medicine, which strengthens and builds up the system, at the same time giving prompt relief to the cold. Father John's Medicine does not contain alcohol or dangerous drugs.
